Senior leaders are accustomed to being successful to most of their undertakings. Leading complex projects, exceeding performance targets, growing the company’s profitability, and generally being right. Could Success though have a flip side? Could Success be reinforcing behaviors that are holding us back from making the leap to the next level in our careers? In our personal life? In our parental role?

Identifying those habits that are entrenched in us and are manifesting both in our professional and personal life is the starting point for instigating change, a change that is inclusive, permanent, and has the power to unlock your performance and of those around you.

Are you prepared?

About the CEO Advisor / Facilitator

Anthony Venios has worked at British Aerospace as an Engineering Trainee, before taking up a role in BAe Systems as a Graduate Engineer. He then moved to Airbus SAS as a Project Manager, and soon after became Head of Braking & Steering Systems for A350XWB Aircraft. He then moved to Invensys plc, as Group Portfolio Manager, responsible for the global Product Portfolio, Investment & Strategy. In 2012, he moved to Greece, where he joined Ergonven, a boutique management consulting firm, as Managing Partner. During his time at Ergonven, he completed a series of restructuring appointments and strategic growth plans for various clients. Most recently, he moved to Carlson Wagonlit Travel, as Country General Manager for Greece and he then joined Proteas as a Partner.

Anthony holds a Bachelor’s in Aerospace Engineering from the University of the West of England, a post-graduate Certificate in Management from the University of Lancaster, and a Masters in Aerospace Dynamics and an MBA from Cranfield University. He is a Chartered Engineer, and a Member of the Royal Aeronautical Society in London.

Anthony is passionate about investing in young people, he is a mentor at the Orange Grove, Dutch Embassy’s incubation centre, and also sits on the panel of mentors for young entrepreneurs in the South-West of England.

He is married to Maria, and have 2 young daughters, Athena and Thalia.
